1 Supporting cryptographic technology: Broadcast encryption with short keys and transmissions

Nuttapong Attrapadung, Kazukuni Kobara

October 2003 Proceedings of the 3rd ACM workshop on Digital rights management DRM '03

Publisher: ACM Press

Full text available: pdf(269.23 KB) Additional Information: full citation, abstract, references, citings, index terms

Broadcast Encryption allows a broadcaster to broadcast an encrypted message so that only a dynamically changing designated group of users can decrypt it. The stateless setting considers the case where the private key at each user is never updated. A central open problem in this area is to design a stateless scheme where both the size of transmission header which encapsulates the session key and the size of private key at each user are small and independent of the number of users (all/priv ...

3 DRM experience: Digital rights management in a 3G mobile phone and beyond

Thomas S. Messerges, Ezzat A. Dabbish

October 2003 Proceedings of the 3rd ACM workshop on Digital rights management DRM '03

Publisher: ACM Press

Full text available: pdf(306.59 KB) Additional Information: full citation, abstract, references, citings, index terms

In this paper we examine how copyright protection of digital items can be securely managed in a 3G mobile phone and other devices. First, the basic concepts, strategies, and requirements for digital rights management are reviewed. Next, a framework for protecting digital content in the embedded environment of a mobile phone is proposed and the elements in this system are defined. The means to enforce security in this system are described and a novel "Family Domain" approach to content management ...

August 2007 Proceedings of the ninth international conference on Electronic commerce ICEC '07

Publisher: ACM Press

Full text available: pdf(386.25 KB) Additional Information: full citation, abstract, references, index terms

An empirical study of unsolicited commercial/bulk e-mail traffic collected from various spam traps (honeypots) is summarized and discussed. Some of these spam traps were created specifically for this study and thus could be monitored since their initialization. This allows for a thorough analysis of the development of current spam traffic on the Internet, quantitatively as well as qualitatively.

On the basis of the data collected over a period of eight months, several important conclus ...

5 Structuring internet media streams with cueing protocols

Jack Brassil, Henning Schulzrinne

August 2002 IEEE/ACM Transactions on Networking (TON), Volume 10 Issue 4

Publisher: IEEE Press

Full text available: pdf(282.39 KB) Additional Information: full citation, abstract, references, citings, index terms

We propose a new, media-independent protocol for including program timing, structure, and identity information in Internet media streams. The protocol uses signaling messages called cues to indicate events whose timing is significant to receivers, such as the start or stop time of a media program. We describe the implementation and operation of a prototype Internet radio station which transmits program cues in audio broadcasts using the Real-Time Transport Protocol (RTP). A collection of ...

6 Supporting cryptographic technology: New traitor tracing schemes using bilinear map

V. D. Tô, R. Safavi-Naini, F. Zhang

October 2003 Proceedings of the 3rd ACM workshop on Digital rights management DRM '03

Publisher: ACM Press

Full text available: pdf(226.82 KB) Additional Information: full citation, abstract, references, index terms

Mitsunari et al [15] presented a new traitor tracing scheme which uses Weil pairing in elliptic curves. To the best of our knowledge this is the first scheme that uses bilinear map. The claimed advantage of the scheme is that the ciphertext size is independent of the number of traitors. It is shown that the problem of constructing a pirate key by k colluders is as hard as the so-called "k-weak Diffie-Hellman problem".In this paper, we show an attack on this scheme in which traitors ...

7 Architectures: DRM interoperability analysis from the perspective of a layered framework

Gregory L. Heileman, Pramod A. Jamkhedkar

November 2005 Proceedings of the 5th ACM workshop on Digital rights management DRM '05

Publisher: ACM Press

Full text available: pdf(295.51 KB) Additional Information: full citation, abstract, references, index terms

Interoperability is currently seen as one of the most significant problems facing the digital rights management (DRM) industry. In this paper we consider the problem of interoperability among DRM systems from the perspective of a layered architectural framework. The advantage of looking at the problem from this point of view is that the layered framework provides a certain amount of structure that is very helpful in guiding those working on DRM interoperability issues. Specifically, the layered ...

Full text available: pdf(275.69 KB) Additional Information: full citation, abstract, references, index terms

When distributing digital content over a broadcast channel it's often necessary to revoke users whose access privileges have expired, thus preventing them from recovering the content. This works well when users make a conscious decision to leave the system or have misbehaved, but numerous cases exist in which the revocation is in error and users are consequently left with the often onerous burden of getting reinstated. We introduce a gradual form of revocation that we call service degr ...

This paper discusses the feasibility of embedding a bit map image (BMP file) into the relational databases for protecting data's copyrights and the term of WDI (Watermarking Databases using Image) is proposed. An error correction approach of BCH (Bose-

10 Ubiquitous WWW: Profiles for the situated web

Lalitha Suryanarayana, Johan Hjelm

May 2002 Proceedings of the 11th international conference on World Wide Web WWW '02

Publisher: ACM Press

The World Wide Web is evolving into a medium that will soon make it possible for conceiving and implementing situation-aware services. A situation-aware or situated web application is one that renders the user with an experience (content, interaction and presentation) that is so tailored to his/her current situation. This requires the facts and opinions regarding the context to be communicated to the server by means of a profile, which is then applied against the description of the application o ...

In this work, we propose and investigate the idea of enhancing a System-on-Chip (SoC) communication architecture (the fabric that integrates system components and carries the communication traffic between them) to facilitate higher security. We observe that a wide range of common security attacks are manifested as abnormalities in the system-level communication traffic. Therefore, the communication architecture, with its global system-level visibility, can be used to detect them. The communicati ...

October 2001 Proceedings of the ninth ACM international conference on Multimedia MULTIMEDIA '01

Publisher: ACM Press

In this paper, we describe error preserving encryption mechanisms for transmission of vido over wireless networks. One of the main problems with the secure transmission of data over wireless networks is that the bit errors that occur need to typically be sesolved before decryption can begin. For vido straming applications, this is unacceptable due to the general requirement that video be presented to the user in a continuous manner with low latency. In this paper, we describe a systematic ...

This paper examines the architecture of present day systems and shows that they are not trustworthy enough to support certain DRM features/restrictions, even when the DRM delivery system exclusively utilizes signed and protected operating system components. This weakness was discovered while creating a technique for remote transfer of audio streams generated by a Virtual Machine Monitor (VMM), to achieve network transparency for audio devices. The technique is based on the implementation of h ...

Digital contents distributed over the internet are regulated by law and by technical management systems. The latter include a semantic component that describes licenses, i.e. rights of use which are granted to the user. These elements of Digital Rights Management (DRM) systems are called Rights Expression Languages (REL), they gather terms and relations needed to build licenses. Some are based on an ontology of online licenses, not necessarily related to applicable law and various legal syste ...

Insider attack is one of the most serious cybersecurity threats to corporate America. Among all insider threats, information theft is considered the most damaging in terms of potential financial loss. Moreover, it is also especially difficult to detect and prevent, because in many cases the attacker has the proper authority to access the stolen information. According to the 2003 CSI/FBI Computer Crime and Security Survey, theft of proprietary information was the single largest category of los ...

In biometric identification, a fingerprint is typically represented as a set of minutiae which are 2D points. A method [4] to protect the fingerprint template hides the minutiae by adding random points (known as chaff) into the original point set. The chaff points are added one-by-one, constrained by the requirement that no two points are close to each other, until it is impossible to add more points or sufficient number of points have been added. Therefore, if the original template consists of ...

Since broadcast encryption was first introduced in 1993 by Fiat and Naor, many broadcast encryption schemes have been developed. Among these, schemes based on tree structure and linear structure are notable. The subset difference (SD) scheme and layered subset difference (LSD) scheme based on tree structure have small user-key size and small transmission overhead when the number r of revoked users is very small. The punctured interval (PI) scheme based on linear (or circular) structure ha ...
